

Knowledge, skills, ethics.

Ethics

in the law do not differ from ethics in the lawyer

"A Legal education challenges one to remember that personal ethics must fulfill the moral responsibility of the profession."

Paul Hillegonds
President, Detroit Renaissance

Cooley Law School Graduate

As much as any law school student must rise to the challenge of academic performance, a Cooley Law School student must measure his or her personal views against objective standards of legal professionalism and ethics. There is no dividing line between a better lawyer and a better person.
